“A student may select a minor in consultation with his or her advisor. The student may then consult an advisor in the minor field who can inform the student of remaining requirements for the minor. When the student has met the requirements for the minor, the advisor in the minor field will then certify that fact to the student's dean. The completed minor will be recorded on the student's permanent transcript, but not on the diploma. A student must be enrolled at the time a minor is approved by the Board of Regents, or subsequent to that date, to receive credit for the minor. A student may have more than one minor.”—University Handbook

Why get a Minor in African Studies?

The African continent is the oldest and the most diverse continent in the world. The diversity of the continent is highlighted in every aspect of life: the people, the languages, the vegetation, the political traditions, the economic practices, the belief systems, world views and so on. An understanding of this unique and diverse continent will not only heighten your sensitivity to the changing nature of the world but it will also improve your comprehension of globalization and interrelationships of all human history and culture. A minor in African Studies will enhance your abilities, options, and opportunities as you enter the global market place.

Minor Contents Description:
